eHRAF (Human Relations Area Files) World Cultures is an online cross-cultural database containing descriptive information on cultures and ethnic groups from around the world. Each culture contains a variety of documents, including books, articles, and dissertations.

To access the database, use the A-Z Research Databases List (under Quick Links) on the Library’s website. If you are accessing from off-site, you will need to login with your university identification. http://library.monmouth.edu

Sample search by culture:

Select Browse Cultures.

The database can be browsed by cultures from an A-Z list, or by regions or countries.

Browsing by countries provides a list of cultures in that country. For each culture, you can view a culture summary, review a description of the collection, or view individual documents.
Cultural Summaries provide information on: demographics, linguistics, history, kinship, marriage, political situation, social structure, religious beliefs, arts, medicine, and death rituals.

You can view all materials by selecting Collection Documents.

You can browse the document from the table of contents, or by page.

To print, scroll to the bottom of the document page and use the print button.
